THIS WEEK: May 14, 2023

"Where Will We Experience the Divine in Our Time?"

David Rosh: Presenter

Jane Castleman: Service Associate

Creation spirituality, the deep awe and wonder we experience in nature, is the oldest spiritual tradition in our world. How then can it be that the ecological balance of our planet is so out of balance, its health in such jeopardy? How did creation spirituality lose its centrality? And what might be the path to regaining the balance in both our inner and outer worlds? .

NEXT WEEK: MAY 21, 2023

“Creative Genius”

Rev. Matt Alspaugh
Deb Gang, Service Associate

In ancient Rome, genius was the deity associated with a person. A particularly strong genius could give a person great powers for achievement, hence they too, were called geniuses. We continue to think of genius as an individual trait, but it seems creative ideas often emerge from community effort. We'll explore the complicated nature of creativity, as we wonder about the geniuses among us - or perhaps, some genius that we all share.

Social Action Team In Action

Colleen Beery and D’Vorah Kelley attended Open Circle at LCS on April 30, where they heard representatives from five Lakeside area charities speak about the need for volunteers. Two of the speakers were from Poco a Poco and Foodbank Lakeside - charities that LCUUF has donated to via Share the Basket since 2020. The need is still great, for both monetary donations and volunteers. We hope to invite representatives from each of the charitable organizations that we donate to later this year to speak at LCUUF in order to get “up close and personal” with the needs of these groups.
